Business News from The City of Frederick, Maryland March 2025

BUSINESS IN FREDERICK MARYLAND

Greetings!

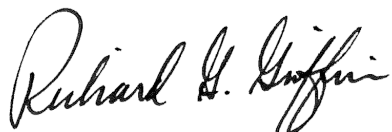

Each year March ushers in uncertain weather, college hoop madness, and more importantly Women's History Month. All month, Frederick has celebrated strong women community and business leaders. In fact, earlier this month Mayor O'Connor moderated a panel of women leaders who talked about the driving winds that pushed them into service and business. Check out the video of the event and their compelling stories. The City Department of Economic Development has been working hard to support women entrepreneurs as they shoot for success while growing their businesses across the city. This issue of Frederick Business eNews includes stories on Women-Led Organizations and Outreach, Maryland Women's Business Center along with stories on the new VFW center, Highland Logistics Center, and McClintock Food Hall and more.

I would like to highlight several strong women leaders who are part of Frederick's dream team and whom I have had the benefit of working with over the years. That team includes Olivia White, a retired executive who is presently serving as the President of African American Resource and Cultural Heritage (AARCH) Society which just held its groundbreaking for a new African American Museum in a prime retail location along East All Saints Street in a space leased from the City. I am proud of the deep relationship which DED has with AARCH and am looking forward to the museum becoming one of Frederick's top attractions. Other key team members rounding out the roster include the recently appointed President of Hood College Debbie Ricker, FCC President Annesa Payne Cheek, FCPS Superintendent Cheryl Dyson, FC Executive Jessica Fitzwater, City Council President Katie Nash, and Council Members Donna Kuzemchak, and Kelly Russell. Frederick is truly fortunate to have top talent.

Here's hoping that stormy March weather "leaves like a lamb" and that Maryland basketball dominates the next round of sweet sixteen basketball. Go Terps! Go Frederick!

Best,

Best,

Richard G. Griffin, AICP, CECd
